YOU will know how Good Clothes can be made when you wear one of our suits

Men who know good clothes at a glance and those who have to leave the choosing of a right style and fabric to the man who does the selling should investigate the immense showing of new spring clothes at this store.

Come here and ask the salesman to show you the particular kind of a suit you have in mind; let him tell you why these clothes will hold their shape, why the materials used are the best, why we are so particular about having every garment made by experienced tailors.

If we can't, with this great stock of good clothes, show you just what you want, whether the color be blue, tan or gray, or the fabric of worsted, serge, flannel or cassimere, we certainly won't expect you to buy.

A great many of our American friends in the district are feeling hurt because of the reports contained in the Calgary liberal daily papers regarding a speech made by R. B. Bennett, one of the members of Calgary, in Montreal last week. According to full reports Mr. Bennett has been badly misrepresented by those papers. The whole thing is unfortunate as there are no better settlers or people who will make better Canadians than our American settlers. When party papers stoop so low as to try to antagonize one section of the people against the other for party purposes, as has been done in these reports, it makes one almost wish that there was a press censorship so that such yellow journalism would be obliterated. As our readers will know we hold no brief for either party in our columns, but we feel that we have a duty to perform in correcting as far as we possibly can such reports detrimental to so large a portion of the good settlers of the west. A full report of Mr. Bennett's speech can be seen in the Montreal Star of Monday, March 4th, or the Calgary Herald of March 16th, as we have not the room to publish it in full, but we copy the following from the Montreal Herald, the leading Liberal paper of Quebec:

"Calgary is said to be excited over remarks attributed to Mr. R. B.
Bennett, when speaking before the Canadian Club of Montreal, to the effect that the Americans who settle in Canada are animated by hatred of Britain. Those who heard him will not agree that this is a correct interpretation of the spirit of his remarks.
He did say that many of our new citizens who come from the States were imbued with a hatred of monarchical institutions and had been taught in their schools to look upon Britain as grasping and tyrannical, but they were making good Canadians, and if they were not enthusiastic Briters it will be our fault if the next generation is not. Mr.
Bennett's words might be distorted but only by withdrawing them from their context and ignoring the spirit of friendliness and appreciation of the good qualities of the American settler, which animated them."

Kept Trade at Home

The story is related of how the merchants in a fair sized village quietly stamped out a great deal of the mail ordering habit among their customers. From day to day they observed large shipments of freight and express coming into the village from the big catalogue houses for distribution among the people whom they were supposed to serve.

Eventually they became alarmed, and after a consultation decided to talk the matter over quietly with their respective customers to persuade them that they could give just as good values as the mail order houses.

This had a splendid effect, and the business formerly sent out being kept at home. Personality gained a victory, and if this phase of a dealer's selling power were more developed, it would mean more business.

They had passed through a long avenue of laurels. Suddenly, the great stone-house in a superb situation on a hill of verdure, flanked by tall trees, and commanding wide views of coast and sea, rose before them. Between them and it ran a deep fosse, crossed by a bridge and a judicious gate, so that a near view was impossible. A thin line of smoke rose into the evening air. Caretakers were in charge of the great mansion, which, with its lofty towers and roof hidden by battlements, and imposing terrace entrance, seemed more like the house of royalty than the abode of a country gentleman.

The dark young man gave a whistle.

"I had no idea it was so big," he murmured, musing to himself that Harry, "extravagant devil" those Clavels were to burden themselves with such a vast establishment! Think of the servants it would want to keep it in order. It was let to old Bevis Francke, the city merchant, for five hundred a year, I know. He rented it four years, and died last summer. Dirt cheap, I call it, don't you?"

"I am no judge of prices for houses in England," Harry returned coolly. He was disgusted with the fellow's self-sufficiency, and looked to get rid of him that he might take his fill of gazing at the place wherein the Clavels had lived for two centuries and a half, standing there magnificently lonely in the still evening air.

His heart beat faster as he reflected that in all probability this splendid structure was his by right, as was the ground upon which he stood. Powerful of his companion's existence, his mind became absorbed in a day-dream concerning the next possessor of Lyllynton.

"Would they be Sir Harry Clavel and the only woman in the world whose stately beauty would fit the place—the Lady Anne?"

Suddenly the man by his side slapped him familiarly on the shoulder.

"How would you like to be asked, if you knew that the whole of that place, with its five miles of dunes and subpods, and Oxbow village, and Lyllynton Lodge and Charlton Harrow, and Lodgers Acher, and Crayburn, and Clifton Down, belonged to you?"

The question so exactly chimed in with Harry's thoughts that he found himself for the moment too much embarrassed to answer. But his sharp-eyed companion's attention was distracted from him just then by a rustling sound among the trees and shrubs, immediately behind where they stood.

"Someone has been following us, and listening to what we said in a low voice. 'I bet I will find out who it is!'"

With wonderful swiftness he turned and darted among the trees. They stood.

fellow, Harry reflected, would have made an admirable detective. The thought that he had seen him here haunted him disagreeably. He wanted to get rid of it and to pursue his train of romantic fancies uninterrupted. As soon, therefore, as his companion had walked quickly by, and presently, after skirting the house for some minutes at the palace of the fosse, he came upon the little chapel of which the sexton at Crayburn had told him.

Three enormous cedar trees were planted near, their heavy branches touched the ground on either side of the door. In their shadow the small stone building, bearing a figure of the Madonna with outstretched hands above the entrance, looked more like a tomb than a place of worship. Within its walls, as Harry knew, wild, wicked Roger Clavel was buried, and it was dedicated to "Our Lady of Mercy."

Again his thoughts flew to Lady Anne and her words at their meeting last night.

"We all want charity," she had said, and Harry, even for such lost souls as Roger Clavel, it was now nearly six o'clock, too late, as Harry realized, to explore the other portion of the estate containing the beautiful lakes and fishponds of which the guide-book had told him. He had forgotten all about the young man with the diamond note of introduction in his pocket, and with a slight shock of surprise and vexation that he came upon him again in the avenue on the farther side of Lyllynton Court lodge, not far from the high road.

"So it's you again!" the young man said. "You gave me the slip, but I caught the fellow who was following us. Got my hand on his collar, and he wriggled himself away. A red-headed, ugly brute, who looked half-witted. I darney, he would have found his wits if he could have got at my purse or my watch! Aren't you going to Lyllynton?"

"I mean to stay the night there. There's a good deal more I intend to find out. See my scarf-pin? I never remain in ignorance for want of asking. Where are you going to sleep?"

"In my bed," Harry answered curtly.

"Good-night!"

He swung around at the turn of the road, and started at a swishing pace in the direction of Crayburn. After a few minutes some instinct prompted him to turn and look back. The road rose a little before dipping into Lyllynton village, and he could distinguish the figure of the man with the diamond pin stepping jauntily along, his hand in his pocket. "Creeping after him in the shadow of the hedge, a shambling figure lurked every now and then stopping to hide among the branches."

Harry hesitated for a moment. Should he call out the "little man?" he asked himself, and warn him that Sammy was on his track? It was still quite light, the village was at a very little distance, and he had been twice assured that day that there was no harm in Sammy. Harry was not satisfied on the last point, but he finally decided not to interfere as the dark-haired stranger seemed fully able to take care of himself.

In the Manor House Farm he found Mrs. Anning occupied in laying the table for his supper. She welcomed him graciously and offered to take him up to his room.

"One thing I have to ask you," Harry said, "how that evil-looking fellow Sammy actually live here with you at the farm?"

"Oh, no, sir; he can't be said to live anywhere. Sometimes he sleeps in a sort of out-house off the kitchen; it's warm for him in winter, but now and then we don't see him for days together. He always ready to lend a hand at anything or to mind the cows, if he's about. It's no charity on our part keeping him, for both Mr. David Varne, and Lady Anne gives us a few shillings a week for him. Mr. Varne says that but for Sammy, Roger Clavel would be still alive and maybe safe in foreign parts. But when Sammy was him kill Jimmy Colton on the bridge and told about it, everybody knew Roger was hiding somewhere about here, and the chase grew so hot that he killed himself in despair. That's why Mr. Varne calls him Sammy a benefactor, and pays for him."

"He doesn't look much like a benefactor," Harry remarked. "Hasn't he any relatives?"

"No, poor fellow! My John was brought up at a farm near in a low class, and Sammy used to follow him about as a boy. Afterwards in his wander-lure he came across Mr. Anning here, and as he doesn't cost us anything we can't let him go without a roof to his head. But he shan't come in your way, sir, while you're here with us; I can answer for that."

She was leading the way upstairs as she spoke. As Harry followed her, he saw one of the dairy-maids at the kitchen door peering out after him with frightened eyes.

"Lord sakes, Jenny!" he heard her whisper, "someone within the kitchen, 'they' be 'tatten' ed in the Witch's Room!"

"I was so weak I could hardly walk around." Mrs. Lloyd continues, "I suffered from female weakness and kidney trouble. My heart troubled me so that I was almost past with the palpitations. I was treated by the doctor but he could give me no relief."

"I was sick all over when I started to use Dodd's Kidney Pills, Rheumatism, Lumbago and Neuralgia adding to my sufferings. But Dodd's Kidney Pills helped me almost at once. After a few night boxes I was completely cured."

A Time to Laugh

(Pincher Creek Echo.)

The Macleod Advertiser has recently been making a big fuss over a new type setting machine it has lately installed. The installation of a Monoline denotes praiseworthy enterprise allright, but Brother Pemble better take it down a little or the contraption will be the death of him. Here is how it fixed a marriage notice and an auction sale advertisement a while ago.

William Blank, the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph J. Blank, was exposed at public auction on Margaret Dash, of this place, in the presence of eighty guests, including two males and nine head of horned cattle.
Rev. J. Hinks tied the nuptial knot, averaging 1200 pounds on the hoof.
The beautiful home of the bride was tastefully decorated with one set double harness, nearly new; before the ceremony Mendelsohn's march was given softly by twenty-one five year old milk cows, looking perfectly charming in a light spring wagon, top buggy, open buggy, well known young man, popular in society circles of about thirty-eight Berkshire hogs, while the bride is an accomplished and talented teacher of a splendid drive of Poland-China shoats, pedigrees furnished if desired. Among the many presents were one hundred bushels of potatoes, one drag harrow, hay fork, rope and pulleys, also other articles too numerous to mention.
The bridal couple left on yesterday morning's train on an extended trip, six months on approved joint notes.
4 per cent. off for cash.

Liesemer-McCaig

A happy event took place on Wednesday, high noon, at the home of the bride's father, Mr. G. McCaig, when his youngest daughter, Hannah, was united to Ed. Liesemer. The bride was given away by her father. She was charmingly gowned in cream silkoline with lace and allover lace trimming and was attended by Miss Lucy Liesemer, Carstairs, who wore a handsome dress of pink silk.
After the ceremony the party, with a few relatives, sat down to a wedding dinner.

Mr. and Mrs. Liesemer will make their future home on the Liesemer farm east of Neapolis.

Future Grain Mov- ing

There appears to be much speculation in some quarters as to the outlook for moving the western grain crop with any degree of promptness in the future. The situation in the past year or two is not likely to continue forever. It has been remarked that the railways do not keep pace with the increasing grain production, and that they are not likely to do so for some years. Two or three years more will bring about a big change, however, unless some unforeseen calamity occurs.

It must be remembered that while the railways have been doing pretty good work in establishing new branch lines in the western provinces, the situation as regards the hauling eastward in the winter has not been benefited very much, but the benefit will, before long, come all of a sudden, as it were.
We are getting accustomed to hearing much about the three great continental railway systems of the country, but it cannot be overlooked that during the period navigation is closed only one line is yet in position to haul to the Atlantic seaboard, while three or four companies haul the grain from the country to the head of the lakes.

The Canadian Northern and the Grand Trunk Pacific railways are struggling to reach the status of transcontinental lines and it will not be long until their ambitions are realized.
When that day comes three main lines will be vying with each other in hauling the grain to the eastern markets, and there will be a vast difference between three roads and one road in that matter. Again the Hudson's Bay railway will, in a few years, be an important outlet; and perhaps one of the most important developments will, in the near future, be the exporting of wheat by way of Vancouver and the Panama canal.

Summing all these probabilities up briefly, it is only the matter of a few years until there will be five great spouts carrying the western grain to the different seaboards in the winter time, without saying much at the present about the summer movement on account of navigation. Why, then, should there be such alarm regarding the future crop moving? All the fargoring factors in transportation are without the consideration that there is the possibility of large quantities being hauled by way of the United States by several other branch rail ways.

The Commercial is of the opinion that prospects for grain transportation from the western fields to the markets of the world are particularly encouraging, and with great confidence in the developments of the coming years these arguments are advanced.—Commercial.

Library Board Met

A quorum of the Library Board met on Friday afternoon last in the Library rooms. Dr. Weart, H. S. Paterson and Sec. Treas. H. E. Osmond present, and Dr. Reid and Mayor Atkins absent.

This being the first meeting for the present year, officers were elected. Dr. A. J. Weart was elected chair man.

The Sec. Treas., H. E. Osmond, stated that he wished to resign his position, but the board would not accept his resignation and he was induced to keep the position for another year.

The Board decided to ask the Council for a grant of $200 this year. There was no grant asked for from the town last year and consequently the Board had to have one this year for salaries and the purchase of new books.

It was decided to put in another stack for books as there are not enough book shelves to contain all the books in the library at the present time and more have been ordered. The meeting then adjourned.

Nothing Doing

The Council met on Monday night but outside of passing two small accounts and deciding to change the fire bell there was very little done.

Councillors Shantz, St. Clair, Cooper, Chambers and Wigglesworth and Solicitor Patterson being present, Mayor Atkins, Coun. Oliver and Sec. Reed, who was sick, absent.

In the absence of Mayor Atkins, Coun. Shantz was moved to the chair. Mr. Parker Reed, brother of the Town Clerk, was present and the Council appointed him as clerk for the meeting.

Bills in the hands of the clerk and O K'd were ordered paid, as follows: J. V. Berscht, $2.50; T. Macdonald, $11.00.

Couns. Chambers Cooper—That the Council exchange the present town bell for a 44 inch Blyner fire alarm bell. Carried.

Couns. Cooper, Wigglesworth—That the Council advertise in the Pioneer that anyone wishing a fire extinguisher will be supplied with same at cost by the town if leaving their order with Coun. H. W. Chambers, chairman of the fire, water and light committee. The meeting stood adjourned.
